Dear parents, carers and families,

It has been a real pleasure this week to spend so much time in classrooms with the children! This week across the whole school, there has been a real focus on the children developing their speaking, listening and communication skills.

In the lower juniors, both Mrs Dorsett and Mrs Greaves classes have been sharing their presentations linked to instructional writing and speaking. The results were really impressive, we heard from all the children and they demonstrated a whole range of different interests and skills through their presentations...from ham sandwiches to dog's dinners and lava lamps to unicorns we saw and heard it all! A huge thank you to all the adults who helped the children prepare for their presentations – they were brilliant.

In the upper juniors, the children have studied Shakespeare this week. Using the principle that to understand and enjoy Shakespeare, you have to say it and feel it, the children have freeze-framed various parts of the story of Romeo and Juliet. They did an amazing job of exploring and understanding the characters and the plot – well done to you all!

All classes have also been working on their 'What makes me happy' individual painting canvas; ready to come together and create a huge new display in the main hall. I sincerely hope you will soon be able to visit the school in person to see the piece when it is finally completed!

Take care, stay safe,

DR
